Result

- Through edification, feeling and experience, children are nourished physically and mentally by the unique Chinese culture, and they can actively learn and pass on Chinese culture. At the same time, cultural activities can enrich children's experience and sense of identity with Chinese culture, making it easier to integrate into society in the future.
- Ingeniously combining moral education with Chinese culture, the activities can help young children establish a concept of right and wrong, such as filial piety, politeness, respect for elders and other Chinese etiquette cultures, and build a positive self-image for young children by practicing them during the Chinese New Year activities.
- Activities can comprehensively improve children's awareness of traditional culture and learn traditional Chinese virtues.
